The majority of it was spent on plank variations; however, there was some cardiovascular training mixed in. I would like to "warm up" before I begin another 8 week program (one that is less plank oriented). I have not been doing cardiovascular/anaerobic training for several months and at some point, it is ok to jump back in, right? Is it too early to get back into cardiovascular/anaerobic training after an 8 week break? A: Unless you've been off for several months (in which case that's a very large break), it's perfectly safe to start lifting again. Exercise moves muscles and bones while at rest, which depletes adenosine triphosphate and initiates the production of lactic acid. Those are all good things for you body when you lift. The adaptation period that results in either strength increases or muscle growth (if you are training for muscle) will have passed once you return to exercise. You should be fine. Cooking is one of the most important activities of every family. Most families spend a portion of their time in the kitchen of some kind of cooking. There are different types of cooking that are used to make many food items. The cooking is nothing but heating and mixing of ingredients with the
